NETEZZA CORPORATION ACQUIRES NUTECH SOLUTIONS

Data Warehouse Appliance Leader Gains Business and Technical Expertise in Predictive Analytics, Optimization and Other Critical Technologies Vital to the Future of Business Analytics

Framingham, Mass. – May 15, 2008 – Netezza Corporation (NYSE Arca: NZ) today announced it has acquired privately-held NuTech Solutions, the North Carolina-based provider of advanced predictive analytics and optimization solutions. This acquisition will extend Netezza’s capabilities in advanced analytics by giving the Company greater intellectual property and expertise in this rapidly growing field.

“As companies continue to increase their focus on competing on analytics, we see a growing demand in the market for the infrastructure and tools to do these advanced analytics,” said Jim Baum, president and COO of Netezza. “By acquiring NuTech Solutions, we are not only getting the analytic expertise of 30 industry-leading scientists and engineers, but also a strong depth of knowledge across key and strategic vertical markets that will further enable our customers’ ability to gain strategic insight from their information assets.”

NuTech Solutions was founded on the cutting-edge work of several world-renowned scientists with a mission to develop truly dynamic technology solutions that could not only predict what’s coming next, but intelligently learn and adapt. According to Bud Whitmeyer, CEO of NuTech Solutions, “Netezza’s acquisition of our company joins the forces of two innovative companies to apply next-generation algorithms and models to maximize the growing volumes of data organizations collect.”

NuTech Solutions will continue to serve its current and future customers as an independent division of Netezza. They have a presence in automotive, consumer goods, national security, petroleum/energy and natural resources, and will continue their operations in Dortmund, Germany and Warsaw, Poland.
